"The Patron Saint of Numismatics"

By George Kovacic

Back in September, 1998 while I still lived in Brooklyn, New York, I mailed a letter to Anthony Swiatek, a writer for Coin World asking him to identify a commemorative coin that I had purchased at a local coin show around that same time. I included a full description of that coin. My inquiry led to a nice letter from Richard Giedroyc who writes a column called "Readers Ask", informing me that I had a medal rather than a commemorative coin. Also, a nice article in reference to my inquiry appeared in March 1, 1999 issue of Coin World. It appeared as follows:

You have a medal rather than a commemorative coin. It fit's the description of the 1974 Van Brook Mint (Lexington, Ky.) St. Eligius medal. The Van Brook medal was struck in bronze, silver and gold vermeil on silver. Each variety has a diameter of 2.25 inches and is octagonal. A coin of King Clotaire of Merovingian Franks struck by Eligius appears on the reverse.

St. Eligius was born in Chaptelat in what today is France. He became a goldsmith and Mint Master. Coining was typically part of the work of a goldsmith at that time. (There were more than 1,000 Mints in operation in France.) The name of moneyers appears on contemporary coins in Britain. In Morovingian Frankland the symbol of the moneyer appears on some coins such as those of Eligius after 585. Eligius used the croix ancree or anchor-cross symbol. Two other moneyers appeared to have used the same symbol, however there are coins known of King Dogobert I with Eligius' name appearing in the Latin legends.

Eligius had been appointed to the court of King Clotaire II, whom was succeded by Dagobert I. It was under Dagobert that Eligius reviewed the coinsge and finances of the kingdom. This made Eligius wealthy as moneyers were allowed to make a profit from coin production.

Eligius became bishop of Noyon-Tournai in 640, a position he held until his death in 659. He condemned slavery, poverty and other sins while serving as bishop. He became patron saint of numissmatics due to his background.

The Joys of Collecting: Thoughtfully buy coins in series of interest

Q. David Bowers once dedicated an entire book chapter to the 1903-O Morgan silver dollar.

In 1903 at the New Orleans Mint, 4.45 million circulation strike silver dollars were minted. Not needed in circulation at the time, most of the coins were stored in vaults. Many were subsequently melted. Those that survived were held in Treasury vaults until 1962.

The Joys of Collecting column from the Nov. 14, 2016, weekly issue of Coin World.

When I began collecting coins in 1952, the emphasis was on collecting coins. No one cared about the price of gold or silver bullion, there were no telemarketers, and no coin sellers advertised on television. Collecting was a lot of fun.

Today, many coin buyers are not collectors at all. They do not acquire coins systematically to build sets. At the moment, the coin market is in a state of flux. Studying coin price cycles is one of my favorite things to do, and over a long period of time I have written a lot about them. Most are predictable. If you want an overview, read my 2005 book, The Expert's Guide to Collecting and Investing in Rare Coins. Although it is not the best-seller among the books I have written, it certainly is a candidate for generating the highest number of letters.

Today, many series are cheaper than they were five to 10 years ago. Some of this is illusory due to grade interpretations being loosened, but a lot is real.

If you are contemplating something to collect, consider Morgan silver dollars 1878 to 1921, averaging Mint State 63 to MS-65. Of the nearly 100 different pieces listed in A Guide Book of United States Coins, the majority can be bought for under $500 per coin, many for below $100.

Don't just buy these coins. Read about them! A few years ago I devoted an entire chapter of a book to the 1903-O Morgan dollar.

Most classic silver commemorative coins (those struck from to 1892 to 1954) are cheaper now than they were in 1988, which was over a quarter century ago! Each one has its own story to tell. Buy them slowly and, again, read about each. There are 50 different designs and a total of 144 variants.

If your budget permits, consider a type set of six different double eagle designs 1850 to 1933.

A rather foolproof way to buy is to review certified coins from graders that guarantee authenticity (it would be interesting to know details of such policies) and pick out those that are well struck and have good eye appeal. Although you can do this yourself, coins with green Certified Acceptance Corp. stickers indicate that they have been reviewed by that company and are considered to be attractive within the grade listed.

Reading is the key to knowledge and success. Coins have stories! Build a small working library.
